Many people are worried that television has caused a lot of effects on American children. For one thing, some teachers feel the television has taken away the child's abilities to learn mental pictures. As a result, children cannot understand a simple story without seeing pictures. Secondly, too much TV tends to cause children to withdraw from real- life experience. Thirdly, they cannot understand the frustration of learning. Finally, the most serious result is the impact of television violence on children who have thought of it as everyday thing.
